Vale is the diminutive work on the plans of the Illuminati and their sisters the communists and Zionists. The book clearly demonstrates that the philosophies and plans of all three are in fact identical. It shows that Adam Weisshaupt (Spartacus Illuminist name) the founder of Illumonism was the author of the principles of the communists and was plagiarized by Karl Marx at the turn of the 20th century in London England. It shows that all leading communist officials as well as planners of the 19th and 20th centuries were Zionists and remains so to this day. The plans for world conquest by the Illuminati are aired in detail.

Rendezvous is the premise that there exists a multi-faceted conspiracy within Western society that is not some far-fetched delusional misconception. It is Dr. Krieg's 14th book relating to 20th and 21st century history, economics and politics. Part one deals with various social, legal, environmental, and geopolitical issues. Part two lists extra-governmental and organizational concerns that are active in management of society, and part three offers alternatives and solution of America's problems. Those in disagreement should consider if they plan their own lives, or if their employer has a business plan, and if both are accepted as fact, why would not the elites of the world also have plans?
